REFERENCES:

5. Storm H, Myre K, Rostrup M, Stokland O, Ræder JC. A case report from a patient that wake up during surgery and was monitored by skin conductance and bispectral (BIS) index. Minerva anesthesiologica 2001(67)suppl 1 N 5:450.

10. Hellerud BC, Wagner K, Henriksen T, Amo T, Storm H. Department of Pediatric Research and Department of Intensive Care, The National hospital, Department of Intensive Care, Ullevål University Hospital, Oslo, Institute of Pharmacology, Trondheim, Norway. Stress activation by suction from trachea in artificial ventilated children in intensive care units measured by skin conductance, heart rate, blood pressure, sedation score, the blood level of morphine, and the break down enzymes of morphine, in prep.

12. Luis R, Storm H. Department of Paediatric Research and Department of Anaesthesiology, The National Hospital, Oslo. Measuring of stress and pain responses on voluntary adult persons after a burning injury by visual analogue scale, blood pressure, heart rate and skin conductance variables, in prep.

14. Eide PK, Storm H, Fremming A, Due-Tønnessen B, Lundar T. Department of Neurosurgery and Department of Pediatric Research, The National Hospital, Oslo. Spontaneous skin conductance as a sign of pain during increased intracranial pressure, in prep.
